

NERDSPOTTING
MySpace CEO
Chris DeWolfe out and about with Paris
Hilton

SOCIAL NETWORKS
4 ways
Facebook helped Sarah Lacy's career

IPO
Rackspace
IPO's lesson?
Rackspace
shouldn't have gone public

ONLINE VIDEO
The definitive guide to watching the Olympics online

GREAT MOMENTS IN JOURNALISM

Russia thrusts into South Georgia with Georgia reported 5 hours ago

JAVA, Georgia (AFP) — Russian tanks and troops surged into Georgia's breakaway South Ossetia province on Friday to repel a Georgian offensive to reclaim the region. The fighting said to have left hundreds dead.

"Fierce clashes" between Russian and Georgian troops in the southern suburb of South Ossetia's capital Tskhinvali were reported on Friday.

Did you know that Russian troops are thrusting into the outskirts of Savannah, Georgia? That's what readers will learn from a Google Maps graphic accompanying a news story about Russian incursions into Georgia — the nation-state in the Caucasus, not the Caucasian-pride-ridden state in the southern United States. Google's mixup will not help Yahoo Answers user Jessica B., who presciently asked, "i herd on the news that rusia has invaded but i dont see them no where wats going on." A screenshot of Google's erroneous invasion map:

Go

Russia thrusts into South Ossetia; clashes with Georgia reported 5 hours ago

JAVA, Georgia (AFP) — Russian tanks and troops surged into Georgia's breakaway South Ossetia province on Friday to repel a Georgian offensive to reclaim the region. The fighting said to have left hundreds dead.

Georgia accuses Russia of seeking to take over South Ossetia

"Fierce clashes" between Russian and Georgian troops in the southern suburb of South Ossetia's capital Tskhinvali were reported on Friday.

